About Devonshire Terrace

Devonshire Terrace in Devonshire Square is a unique wedding venue in the heart of the City of London. Steeped in history, Devonshire Square was built in the early 1800s to store goods shipped from Bengal including silk, ivory and mother-of-pearl.

The glass roof over the western courtyard makes Devonshire Terrace an all-weather location and frames a view of iconic London landmark 'the Gherkin' which creates a picturesque setting for civil ceremonies and wedding receptions.

During the week Devonshire Square is a hive of activity but on weekends and bank holidays it is an impressive and tranquil space making it the ideal location for your big day.

From the food, to decoration and layout, we understand that your special day needs to reflect you as a couple so we offer a completely flexible service. Our sample menus and packages can all be tailored to make sure that your day is everything you've dreamed of.
